The North Pole Mission Kit

You've Been Selected

for a Very Important Christmas Mission

Dear Junior Agent _____,

Santa's Naughty & Nice Department has reviewed thousands of files this year, and yours stood out. Effective tonight, you have been officially recruited into the North Pole Agency as a Junior Christmas Agent.

A small scout elf has been assigned to your house to help run the mission. It may move around at night, leave notes, or get into a little mischief of its own — that's normal, and it means the mission has begun.

Over the next several nights, you'll receive Secret Mission Cards, Scavenger Clues, and challenges only a trusted agent can be given. Complete them, and more surprises will follow.

Your first assignment: find your Junior Christmas Agent ID Card (enclosed) and sign it. This makes it official.

Tell no one outside this house. The mission depends on it.

In frost and confidence,

The North Pole Agency

Emergency Parent Cheat Sheet

For the nights you forgot. You've got this.

- 2 minutes before they wake up: tip over one chair, toss tinsel across the counter, sprinkle a little flour "footprints" on a dark floor — or just move the scout somewhere new.
- Out of clue ideas: reuse the fridge, bathroom sink, or under-the-tree clue — kids rarely notice repeats.
- Forgot to move the scout entirely: "The scout said it was too tired from flying reports last night and hid extra well — go find it!"
- Need a 30-second setup: stand the scout somewhere new, prop a mission card against a cereal box, done.
- Out of mission cards: issue a verbal mission: "Agent, tonight's mission is simply — be kind to your brother before bed."
- Kid is suspicious: "The Agency reviews all suspicious behavior. I'd focus on your own mission, Agent."

Mission Complete

A Final Letter From the North Pole Agency

Dear Agent _____,

The mission is complete. Every task, every clue, every act of kindness has been logged in your file, and the whole North Pole Agency is proud of the agent you've become this season.

Our scout has been called home to help with final preparations before the big night. It asked us to say thank you for taking such good care of it, and for making this house one of the kindest stops on the route.

Your Mission Complete Certificate is enclosed. Keep it somewhere safe — agents are called back to duty every December.

Until next year, Agent.

With frost, gratitude, and one last wink,
